Brooke Army Medical Center

BY BRIG. GEN. JOHN M. WILLIS
Commandant, Brooke Army Medical Center

A NEW era in the annals of Military medicine is represented in Brooke Army Medical Center, Fort Sam Houston, Tex. This Center was established 1 February 1946 under the jurisdiction of The Surgeon General.

Gen. Willis
tioning of the injured, sick, or wounded soldier.

Recruits learn their basic and technical military subjects, and to assist in the treatment of the sick and injured. Technicians learn to analyze blood, purify water, fight disease, repair delicate medical equipment, assist operating surgeons and fill prescriptions. Doctors learn to apply their technical knowledge in the solution of military problems. Officers and men of all grades find appropriate training to suit their abilities.

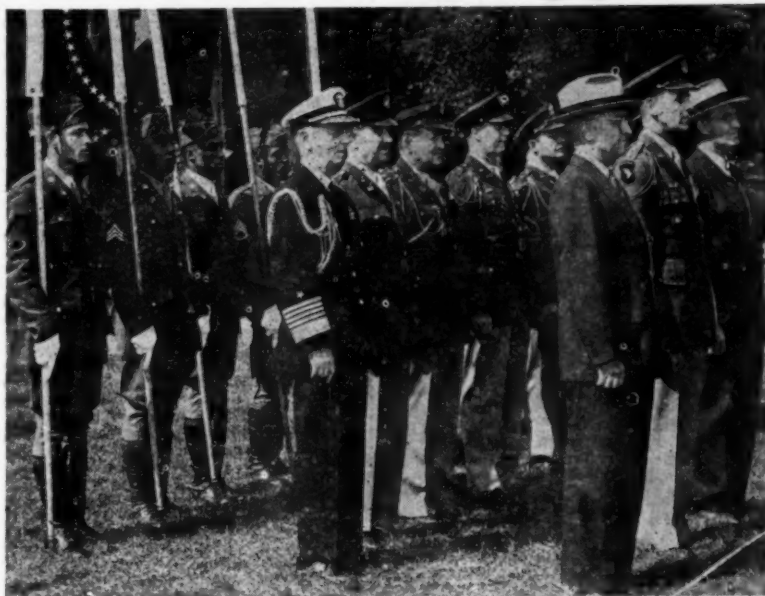

The Center is at present divided into seven major units: Headquarters, Brooke Army Medical Center; Brooke General Hospital; Army Medical Department Schools; Medical Training Center; Medical Department Enlisted Technicians School; Army Area Laboratory; and Central Dental Laboratory.

Patients in Brooke General Hospital and its convalescent annex are not only given the finest in medical care but also the best in physical and mental reconditioning and in education job training.

The hospital was constructed as "Station Hospital, Fort Sam Houston Texas," and turned over to the Medical Department on Nov. 22, 1937. It was redesignated Brooke General Hospital, on Sept. 4, 1942, in honor of Brig. Gen. Roger Brooke, former commander of the hospital. On April 25, 1945, the hospital expanded its facilities, and, with the Brooke Convalescent Hospital, was integrated into the Brooke Hospital Center. On establishment of the Brooke Army Medical Center, the convalescent hospital became an annex of the general hospital.

The General Hospital offers not only complete medical and surgical services to its patients, but also neuro-psychiatric, and convalescent care to the patients who may need such attention. In addition, it operates a school for cadet dietitians, as well as a course in advanced mess administration for graduate army hospital dietitians.

The Army Medical Department Schools provide basic military training for medical personnel. (Please turn to Page 150)

Army Promotion Publicity

Senator Burnet R. Maybank (D-S. C.) a ranking member of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, told the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL this week that he believes the War Department should give out early information as to the promotion and retirement legislation it will recommend to the next Congress.

This should be done, Senator Maybank declared, so that officers of the Regular Army and those Reservists contemplating accepting commissions in the Regular Establishment, will know what system will likely govern their future careers.

Senator Maybank stated it as his belief that "a change is necessary to keep the Army vigorous, and to effect this he would favor the method of selection by merit, selection to start with the promotion of majors to the grade of lieutenant colonel."

The Senator also said that he intends on the opening day of the new Congress to reintroduce a bill similar to the HR 7063, which failed in the last Congress, to provide retirement benefits for Reserve and National Guard officers and to retire Regular personnel at their highest wartime temporary ranks.

In relation to the subject of unification of the services, the Senator stated that his mind has not been made up, but that "The Air Force should be materially increased and given a more prominent place in the military set-up."

In regard to universal military training, Senator Maybank said that "in the confused world of today we need to be (Please turn to Page 132)

The Navy General Board

Whether the General Board should be abolished or restored to its pre-war position of preeminence as an advisory council to the Secretary of the Navy is a question Secretary Forrestal has asked of some of the Navy's veteran flag officers.

Some admirals favor continuing the General Board as an advisory group composed of the most experienced men of the Navy. Others, however, have recommended that the present Board be disbanded and that recognition of the Board be permanently deleted from U. S. Navy Regulations.

The question of abolishing the General Board has arisen because it now has very little work to do. Most of the studies for which it was originally constituted were directed to groups within the office of the Chief of Naval Operations at the start of World War II, and this transfer of advisory and planning functions has been carried over into the peacetime organization.

All of the reports requested by the Secretary have not yet arrived in his office, Mr. Forrestal declared this week, and no decision as to the future of the General Board is expected until its usefulness in the postwar Naval organization is more fully determined.

Mr. Forrestal himself originated the poll of admirals, he said. The General Board, which now functions with the minimum five-man membership required by Navy Regulations, looks upon itself as an agency available for the study of such subjects or projects as the secretary may (Please turn to Page 132)

Army Sharply Curtails Transfers of Officers

A drastic curtailment in permanent changes of station for officers has been ordered by the War Department effective immediately.

While those who have less than one year to serve and those who have not completed at least a year on their current assignment are specifically mentioned as personnel affected by this order, the War Department emphasizes that this is not to be construed as limiting the tour of duty in the zone of the interior to one year. It is pointed out that it is the present policy to keep officers at one station as long as possible, with rotation of duties within commands at the same station.

Only in the existence of a compelling reason will the curtailment fail to be effective except in the case of those ordered to personnel centers for separation, those ordered home from general hospitals to await retirement, those ordered to and returning from overseas assignments, those ordered to duty with civilian components and those ordered to and from service schools and civilian institutions as students.

Text of the War Department directive, dated 27 Sept., announcing the order follows:

"1. The Secretary of War has directed a drastic curtailment in permanent change of station for officers be effected immediately.

"2. In order to accomplish this, effective 1 Oct. 1946, you will, in requesting permanent change of station orders, state in detail reasons for the movement of each officer, together with an estimate of the cost of the change of station.

"3. Except for extremely cogent reasons the following officers will not be moved:

"a. Those who have less than one year to serve.

"b. Those who have not completed at least a year on their current assignment. (Note: Nothing in this paragraph is to be construed as limiting the tour of duty in the zone of interior to 1 year. On the contrary, it is the policy of the War Department to keep officers at one station as long as possible, consistent with career planning and overseas requirements. Much can be accomplished in the military education of officers by rotation of duties within commands at the same station.)

"c. Exception to the reassignments and transfers requiring specific reasons follow:

"(1) Those ordered to personnel centers for separation.

"(2) Those ordered by commanding generals of general hospitals to homes awaiting retirement.

"(3) Those ordered to and returning from overseas assignments.

"(4) Those ordered to duty with civilian components.

"(5) Those ordered to and from service schools and civilian institutions as students."

General Cobbs with WAA

Brig. Gen. Nicholas H. Cobbs, USA-Ret., former Chief Finance Officer and later Fiscal Director, European Theater of Operations, U. S. Army, until his retirement from active service last month, has been named Deputy Administrator for Fiscal Services, War Assets Administration, Washington, D. C.

Peace Time Training

Washington Star—"Being a compromise, the universal military training announced by the War Department is not so strong as the one which the Army vainly urged Congress to approve last year. In modifying the program the War Department was mindful of the difficulties it encountered with draft and military training legislation at the last session of Congress."

New York Sun—"It is significant that this plan has been issued by the Public Relations Division of the War Department. That constitutes tacit acknowledgment of the fact that this issue is likely to be settled by public opinion, even if it be settled in a negative sense by the apathy of public opinion."

Boston Traveler—"In a few years it would give us a huge backlog of young citizens with the rudiments of military knowledge and skills. That might be an asset. On the other hand it might turn the Regular Army into a tutoring school for rookies."

New York Post—"If we have to have an army, and one look at the world today leaves no doubt on that score, then the War Department's plan seems like an American way of getting one."

Chicago Sun—"There is an obvious danger that under such a setup the Army might exert a crippling, unwholesome influence on college curriculums."

Boston Christian Science Monitor—"The first question to be asked is—is it sufficiently adequate to justify thoughtful attention? We think it looks so—provided the second six months of various military and nonmilitary alternatives to straight Army training are held to a standard of solid and pertinent work, and not watered down with enticements."

Baltimore Sun—"Decision, of course, will rest with Congress, which thus far has exhibited little enthusiasm for the general idea. * * * The War Department has presented in a concrete proposal the issue that is to be debated."

New York Herald Tribune—"The War Department plan is quite complex, and would call for a high degree of skillful organization. Its impact upon educational institutions might be little short of revolutionary—and unless applied with caution, not to the advantage of the nation."

Boston Globe—"The whole plan deserves close study. It represents the judgment of the War Department as to national need and reasonable flexibility. The discussion is now open."

Philadelphia Record—"The American people—by about three to one—favor permanent peacetime military training. Up to now, highly vocal and compactly organized pressure groups have succeeded in blocking such a program in Congress. Will that same minority be able to block the new plan for peacetime conscription presented by Secretary of War Patterson? The answer to that question will be an intelligence test for our people—and a character test for the Congress."

British Defense Ministry

A plan for achieving a unified defense policy in England through creation of a "Minister of Defense" responsible for correlating land, sea, and air forces as separate services, paralleling the Navy-sponsored Eberstadt plan suggested for this country, has been proposed by the Labor government for consideration of the next session of Parliament.

The government plan, as proposed in a White Paper issued last week, retains the three separate services—army, navy, and air force—under their separate Ministries, and continues the Chiefs of Staff system. Complete "amalgamation" is postponed for the present, with the view that it might be found more desirable in the future, and, because of the failure of the German staff system, the Labor government rejected completely the principle of a "Combined General Staff."

The first Minister of Defense will be an Admiralty man, Mr. Albert V. Alexander, who was transferred last week to head the Ministry of Defense which is proposed as successor to the existing Committee of Imperial Defense. The new Ministry is designed to overcome the "one defect of organization which contributed to the unpreparedness of the services" prior to the war in 1939—"the absence from the machinery of the Committee of Imperial Defense of a guiding hand to formulate a unified defense policy for the three services."

In outlining the new organization which the government hopes to effect, the White Paper states:

"After reviewing the development of our defense organization, over the last forty years and its practical performance under the test of two major wars, His Majesty's Government are satisfied that there are no grounds for any drastic re-casting of the main structure of the organization as it exists today. Some changes are, however, required in order to consolidate the advances which have been made in recent years under the compulsion of war or of the threat of war. Above all, experience during these years has shown the need of a Minister who has both the time and authority to formulate and apply a unified defense policy for the three Services; and it is proposed that this need should be met by the creation of a Minister of Defense."

Form of Organization

The form of the proposed organization is summarized as follows:

"(a) The Prime Minister will retain the supreme responsibility for defense.

"(b) The Defense Committee, under the Chairmanship of the Prime Minister, will take over the functions of the old Committee of Imperial Defense, and will be responsible to the Cabinet both for the review of current strategy and for coordinating departmental action in preparation for war.

"(c) A new post of Minister of Defense, with a Ministry, will be created. The Minister of Defense will be responsible to Parliament for certain subjects . . . affecting the three Services and their supply. In addition, he will be Deputy Chairman of the Defense Committee; and he will also preside over meetings with the Chiefs of Staff whenever he or they may so desire.

"(d) The Chiefs of Staff Committee will remain responsible for preparing strategic appreciations and military plans, and for submitting them to the Defense Committee; and the Joint Staff system will be retained and developed under their direction.

"(e) The Service Ministers will continue to be responsible to Parliament for the administration of their Services in accordance with the general policy approved by the Cabinet and within the resources allotted to them."

Functions

The White Paper continues with an outline of the "functions of the Minister of Defense":

"Apart from his duties as Deputy Chairman of the Defense Committee, it is proposed that the Minister of Defense should, as such, be responsible for the following functions:—

"(a) The apportionment, in broad outline, of available resources between the three Services in accordance with the strategic policy laid down by the Defense Committee. This will include the framing of general policy to govern research and development, and the correlation of production programs.

"(b) The settlement of questions of general administration on which a common policy for the three Services is desirable.

"(c) The administration of inter-Service organizations, such as Combined Operations Headquarters and the Joint Intelligence Bureau.

"The minister will bring his proposals under (a) before the Defense Committee and the Cabinet. He will present the Cabinet's decisions on these to Parliament, and will decide questions arising between the three Services in their application. He will not be responsible for the subsequent detailed execution of the approved programs, which will be the task of the Service and Supply Ministers. As a consequence of (b), he will answer questions in Parliament on matters common to the three Services or to the three Services and the Ministry of Supply."

Resources

The White Paper describes "apportionment of resources" which the new organization would permit:

"The new organization must be such as to ensure that the resources available for defense are laid out to the best advantage in terms of manpower, weapons and equipment, works services, amenities, etc. . . . The Chiefs of Staff will advise the Defense Committee on our strategic requirements from year to year. It will then be for the Service Departments to translate these requirements into terms of men, money and supplies, and for the Minister of Defense to co-ordinate the results, with the help of the Chiefs of Staff and the Committee of Service Ministers . . . and to present to the Defense Committee a coherent scheme of expenditure which will give the country forces and equipment in properly balanced proportions. On production questions there will be a standing Ministerial Production Committee consisting of the Service Ministers, the Minister of Supply and the Minister of Labor, over which the Minister of Defense will preside. Working for this Committee there will be a Joint War Production Staff, composed of serving officers and representatives of the Service and Civil Departments concerned, under a permanent Chairman who will be appointed to the staff of the Minister of Defense."

Reject Unification

In rejecting principles of complete unification under a single cabinet post and the principle of a "Combined General Staff," the White Paper declares:

"During the war a unified defense policy was achieved by the assumption of executive control by the Prime Minister and Minister of Defense. How is it to be achieved in peace?"

"One method would be to amalgamate the three Services completely, and to place them under a single Minister of the Crown. This has been advocated by some as the logical development of the close relations which have been built up during the war between the operation of forces by sea, land, and air and as a means of giving full play to scientific development in weapons. His Majesty's Government do not wholly reject this conception: it may be that at some stage in the future amalgamation might be found desirable. They have decided, however, that this is a step which could not and should not be taken here and now."

"Another method which has been suggested from time to time is the creation of a 'Combined General Staff.' Critics of our organization have contended that the Chiefs of Staff Committee, and the Joint Staffs for planning, intelligence, and administrative planning, do not form a combined General Staff in the sense of an impartial central organization which plans operations without regard for Service prejudice or sectional interests. Our own experience, however, and a close study of captured German archives showing the works of the German Oberkommando der Wehrmacht (O.K.W.), combined to demonstrate that this conception is not only inferior to our Joint Staff system, but has defects which in practice proved disastrous. The German system failed because the Planning Staffs of the O.K.W. were not drawn from the headquarters of the three Services. The plans they produced had later to be handed to those headquarters for execution, and were often found to be unrealistic. The cleavage between planning and execution set up dangerous antagonisms, and entirely nullified any theoretical advantages of the German system."

"It has always been a cardinal principle of the British organization that, alike in the Chiefs of Staff Committee and in the Joint Staffs, it should be the men responsible in the Service Departments for carrying out the approved policy who are brought together in the central machine to formulate it. The soundness of this principle has been amply proved in practical experience in war. The methods employed in the British organization were adopted without alteration in the machinery of the Combined Chief of Staff, and at the various Anglo-American headquarters formed in the field."

"It has sometimes been suggested that, even though our Joint Staff system is based on sound principles, it would be improved by the appointment of an independent Chairman of the Chiefs of Staff Committee, either a civilian of wide experience and proved ability or an ex-Chief of Staff. This suggestion ignores the facts as they exist, and as they have existed for many years. It has always been recognized that, whenever he sees fit, the Prime Minister can himself preside at meetings of the Chiefs of Staff Committee. Before the war, the Minister for Co-ordination of Defense was also empowered to assemble the Committee and to take the Chair himself. During the war, there were many occasions on which the Prime Minister in his capacity as Minister of Defense did preside over the Chiefs of Staff Committee, and at all times he took a most active part in directing the work of the Committee in accordance with the demands of the general situation. By this means the Prime Minister was able to place ideas before the Chiefs of Staff for professional examination, to keep them in touch with political matters which had military implications, and thus to direct in a broad way the work of the Joint Staffs as a whole. The Prime Minister did not, however, act as the mouthpiece of the Chiefs of Staff before the Cabinet and Defense Committee."

Release of Medical Officers

Supplementing the recently announced War Department policy for the release of officers from service is an amendment relating specifically to Medical Department officers.

Medical Department officers on duty in General Hospitals closing out prior to 1 Jan. 1947, may be retained on duty 60 days from date of eligibility, but must be released to begin terminal leave not later than 31 Dec. 1946.

Medical Department officers on duty in Regional Station Hospitals may be retained on duty beyond date of eligibility, but must be released to begin terminal leave not later than 1 Dec. 1946.

All Category III Army Nurse Corps officers may be retained on duty beyond 1 Nov. 1946, but must begin terminal leave not later than 1 Dec. 1946, except those on duty in General Hospitals closing out prior to 1 Jan. 1947, who may be retained on duty until the hospital closes but in no case will their terminal leave begin later than 31 Dec. 1946.

Stop Upper Grade Promotions

Promotion to the grades of master sergeant or first sergeant and technical sergeant in the Army have been suspended. It is planned to resume promotions in approximately 90 days upon completion of a study currently being made to determine the advisability of making readjustments within the first and second enlisted grades.

Almost six months ago the Army was nearing the saturation point in the first enlisted grade, but not in the second and third grades. At that time it was also learned that the Army would probably make some changes in tables of organization in order to insure the continued opportunity for promotion of enlisted personnel to the higher grades. Such changes would likely consist of giving higher grades to several duties and positions now filled by personnel below the highest grades. Such a change would remedy the situation where men surplus in grade are carried in their grades until normal attrition removes them and leaves openings for promotions to the higher grades.

Exceptions are authorized to the promotion suspension order only in case of combat wounded as prescribed in War Department Circular 215, 1946.

Regardless of the results of the current study, former officers and warrant officers may continue to enlist in the first grade, under the provisions of War Department Circular 110, 1946.

This enlistment of former officers has been a contributing factor to the present crowding of the upper grades, as has the reenlistment of those holding such grades.

Effective 30 Oct. 1946, no person will be enlisted in a higher grade than grade three under the provisions of War Department Pamphlet 12-16, 25 June 1946.

An individual currently eligible for enlistment under the provisions of that pamphlet in the second grade, may, on and after 30 Oct., be enlisted in the third grade.

The War Department also called attention to the provisions of War Department circular 110, 1946, authorizing enlistments in the Regular Army in the first grade of former officers, warrant officers, and flight officers, provided enlistment is accomplished within 20 days from date of release from active duty.

Due to the constantly changing conditions affecting personnel of the Army, the War Department states that it cannot commit itself to any specified period of time for which the policy will remain in effect.

However, such personnel will be informed immediately when a change in that policy is contemplated. Sufficient notice will be given by the War Department to allow adequate time to effect release from active duty, take advantage of any accrued leave, and enlist in the Regular Army in accordance with provisions of the current policy.

Disability Retirements Criticized

Criticism of the Army and Navy physical disability retirements will lead to restrictive legislation at the coming session of Congress, according to Representative Overton Brooks, La.

Mr. Brooks quoted War Department figures as showing that 103 generals and 535 colonels retired for physical disability between 1 May 1935 and 30 April 1946, while only 34 generals were retired for other reasons. The Navy Department reports that 18 admirals and 56 captains were retired during the same period for disability, while other reasons accounted for the retirement of 5 admirals and 8 captains.

"It is my belief that disabled personnel should be retired on a percentage basis—if 1/2 disabled they should be retired on 1/2 of their active duty pay. People are critical of retirement for disability when retired personnel are still able to go out and compete with others in civilian life."

Asked whether he did not believe income-tax exemption should be extended to officers on reaching the statutory age limit, Representative Brooks said, "Age is a disability, as it limits ability to enter into civilian competition. Tax exemption should therefore apply to those retired for age, equally with those retired for physical disability."

Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, The Surgeon General, this week received the Cross of the Legion of Honor in the Degree of Commander from Brig. Gen. Raymond Debenedetti, Surgeon General of the French Army. Ceremony took place at the office of the French Military Attache, Lt. Gen. Maurice Mathenet, Washington, D. C.

Col. Kilian's Appeal

In an appeal to the Army Judge Advocate General, defense counsel for Col. James A. Kilian contends that his conviction establishes a precedent in U. S. Army courts martial by holding a commander criminally responsible for the acts of subordinates merely by virtue of the fact that he was actually in command.

"Such a principle would destroy discipline in all grades and rightfully cause all commanders, from Private First Class to General of the Army, to shun such criminal responsibility of command," the appeal states.

Colonel Kilian was found guilty late in August of charges that he "permitted the imposition of cruel, unusual and unauthorized punishment" on prisoners under detention at the Lichfield Replacement Depot in England, after the court had removed the word "knowingly" from the charge. The court found Colonel Kilian not guilty of charges that he "authorized and aided and abetted" the imposition of this punishment.

Lt. Col. Raymond E. Ford, Inf.-Res., individual defense counsel for Colonel Kilian, has appealed the conviction on a number of points of law, but lays particular emphasis on the precedent which this conviction establishes concerning criminal responsibility of a commanding officer. On this point, Colonel Ford has appealed to the JAG as follows:

"Is a Commanding Officer of a large Post, in the U. S. Army, criminally responsible for criminal offenses committed by subordinates of which he has no knowledge, actual or imputed, and which he has not authorized nor aided nor abetted, merely by virtue of his position?"

"While under Army regulations a Commanding Officer is by virtue of position responsible for everything within his command, he is not criminally responsible for same. For improper performance of duty he may be demoted, B-boarded, given less responsible assignment, not recommended, etc. For any person, a commanding officer or otherwise, to be criminally responsible for acts of omission or commission, intent (knowledge, actual or imputed) is a vital and necessary element of the offense. To hold a commanding officer criminally responsible for unauthorized offenses of subordinates, of which he had no knowledge, merely by virtue of his position, is to establish a dangerous precedent. Officers will rightfully shun the criminal responsibility of command position; discipline will be destroyed in all grades; and individual justice and the reliance on law to protect the innocent individual will have vanished."

Marine General Promoted

Maj. Gen. Allen H. Turnage, Assistant Commandant of the Marine Corps since August 1945, was promoted 8 Oct. to the temporary rank of Lieutenant General.

General Turnage is to be relieved as Assistant Commandant in the near future by Lt. Gen. Lemuel Shepherd, and will then succeed Lt. Gen. Roy S. Geiger as Commanding General of the Fleet Marine Force sometime in December.

A veteran of nearly 33 years' service, General Turnage as head of the FMF will command all the amphibious elements of the Marine Corps, including divisions now in China and in the United States. His headquarters will be in Pearl Harbor.

Infantry Extension Courses

A new and improved Army Extension Course for Infantry, revived after lying dormant through the war years, toddled its first step this week by issuing a limited number of sub-courses for non-resident study of military instruction.

Mailing of the first such courses on 1 Oct. climaxed preparations begun in Aug. 1945 when Army Ground Forces, bent on reviving its mail-order educational program, requested information from various service schools concerning available facilities and recommendations for changes in the pre-war organization.

The new Extension Course Section of The Infantry School, organized early this year under Col. Wayne Archer as Director of Extension Courses, is supervised by Brig. Gen. W. P. Shepherd as assistant commandant who, in turn, acts for the Commandant in planning and supervising resident instruction at The Infantry School.

Two changes in policy indicate closer supervision and attention to detail than ever before in what will be the world's largest correspondence course. The first, a War Department directive, decentralizes preparation and administration of sub-courses so that each service school prepares and checks material relevant to its own field, with Command and Staff College courses done in a like manner. This replaces the pre-war system by which each corps area, corresponding to the more recent service commands, administered its own operations, with distribution and grading of lessons accomplished principally by unit instructors of the National Guard and Reserve in the field.

The second major change, this upon decision of the assistant commandant of The Infantry School, delegates the preparation of all instructional material to School Instructional sections, with the Extension Course Section primarily responsible only for the form of the material and its conformity with the best correspondence school technique. Thus, preparation of courses to include latest developments in each phase is done by persons who are responsible for resident instruction at The Infantry School, with the solutions to each sub-course lesson prepared in a similar manner for use by the grading section. Grading officers are also charged with furnishing information on which to base revisions of sub-courses to eliminate flaws indicated by a high percentage of failures or otherwise detectable from the grading.

Information as to eligibility for enrollment and methods of enrollment is contained in AR 350-3000, 30 March 1946. This information is likewise available at the headquarters of any Reserve or National Guard unit. Reserve corps applicants not assigned to regularly organized units may forward applications direct to their Regular Army instructor who will, in turn, forward them to The Infantry School.

Thus far, according to Colonel Archer, Extension Course Director at The Infantry School, about six sub-courses in each of the six numbered series have been completed.

Sub-courses now ready for distribution at The Infantry School and available upon request include the following: 10-2 "Leadership, Discipline, Courtesy and Customs of the Service," 4 lessons and exam; 10-13, "Military Law—The Law of Military Offenses," 6 lessons and exam; 20-3, "Military Law—Courts Martial," 9 lessons and exam; 30-2, "Training Management," 5 lessons and exam; 50-1, "Terrain Evaluation," 5 lessons and exam; 60-1, "Tactical Use of Motors," 9 lessons and review; and 60-2, "Development and Security of an Infantry Regiment in Defensive Combat," 6 lessons and review.

Army Personnel Management

The War Department has instituted a program of personnel management study extending throughout the Army school system. Initial aim of the plan is to indoctrinate all staff officers of the Regular Army in knowledge of personnel management and administration, but in time every Regular Army officer on active duty will have training in this field.

A selected group of officers is being trained to form a nucleus of personnel experts, 25 officers being placed in civilian universities to follow intensive one-year courses. The five foremost students among the 25 will be chosen to attend additional one-year courses.

Officers completing one year's study are to be assigned to the War Department General Staff, headquarters of the major commands, headquarters of overseas commands or, on a temporary duty basis, to observe at first hand personnel procedures and methods in civilian industry. Officers completing two years' study will be detailed with the War Department General Staff for two or more years of work in personnel procedures.

A course in Military Psychology and Leadership will be included in the curricula of upper classmen at the U. S. Military Academy. This year the personnel course will be given during the final semester, and is to be a full-term course beginning with the ensuing academic year.

A second phase of the program calls for inclusion of personnel management and related courses at the supplementary education and training schools set up for officers at every post, camp and station in the United States and overseas.

A basic nine-months' course is set up which all Regular Army officers will attend upon entering active duty, the first four months at Fort Benning, Ga., and the final five months at schools specializing in matters relating to the officer's respective arm or service. All officers—approximately four years after completing the basic course—will attend schools conducted by the various arms and services for ten-month terms.

Plan Post and Camp Separation

A progressive plan to return Army enlisted personnel directly to civilian life from camps and posts in the United States rather than to send them to separation centers for processing has been announced by the War Department.

Commanding officers of camps and posts in the United States possessing the necessary facilities have been authorized to process their own separations. Overseas personnel will continue to be processed through separation centers and personnel of camps and posts in the United States which do not have the necessary facilities for separation processing will be sent to the nearest post with adequate facilities.

Navy General Board

decide to refer to it, and therefore has not seen fit to originate recommendations either for its own dissolution or to request more work.

Although the Board as a group has made no formal recommendations, the views of its individual members are included in the report submitted by Vice Admiral Frank J. Fletcher, senior member and acting chairman, who is one of the admirals polled by Secretary Forrestal.

Besides Vice Admiral Fletcher, the present Board consists of Vice Admiral John H. Hoover, Vice Admiral P. N. L. Bellinger, Vice Admiral Charles H. McMorris, and Rear Adm. Robert W. Hayler, all of whom had war experience and earned outstanding records.

Also included in the report from Vice Admiral Fletcher are the opinions of several former fleet commanders, whom Admiral Fletcher polled on this subject. These include Admirals J. O. Richardson, Husband E. Kimmel, Thomas C. Hart, Claude C. Block, and Edward C. Kalbfus.

Although the General Board is highly respected throughout the Navy as a powerful group with great prestige, it has had very little of importance to do recently. The changeover from Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King to Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz as Chief of Naval Operations brought little or no change in the amount of work directed to the General Board. Expectations of a year ago that the Board would be given more work and a larger membership have not been fulfilled.

It is believed that Fleet Admiral Nimitz, in response to Secretary Forrestal's poll, has recommended elimination of the General Board. It is speculated that he may have submitted this proposal many months ago, even before Mr. Forrestal began his poll of veteran admirals.

It is generally agreed that some other prominent flag officers favor dissolving the Board, and that for this reason some admirals have turned down offers to serve on it.

Navy Regulations require that the General Board consist of five line officers of the rank of Captain or flag rank, of which a majority are of flag rank, plus other officers designated by the Secretary of the Navy. It is primarily an advisory body, and neither the Board nor any of its members are charged with any executive or administrative duties.

Specifically, Navy Regulations prescribe the following duties for the General Board:

"Consider and recommend to the Secretary what the naval policy of the United States shall be, together with the principles governing the development, organization, maintenance, training, and operation of the Navy."

"Recommend to the Secretary the number and types of ships and aircraft making up the U. S. Fleet."

"Pass on the annual building program to be sent to Congress."

"Consider and recommend the military characteristics of new ships and planes and of major repairs to existing vessels. In this connection, the preliminary plans of new ships must be submitted to the board and they must be consulted before the Bureau of Ships makes any major changes."

"Consider and recommend the number of naval bases and yards, and any other subjects referred to them by the Secretary."

The General Board was created some

Gen. MacArthur Not Candidate

Tokyo—A news report from the United States carried a statement by Representative A. L. Miller of Nebraska regarding the possibilities of General MacArthur's participation in the 1948 presidential campaign. When asked by the press to comment on Representative Miller's statement, General MacArthur said:

"As I have repeatedly stated, I have no political ambitions, contacts or plans, and I am not a candidate for the high office of President of the United States. There are no grounds whatsoever for statements to the contrary. I reiterate what I have so frequently said before that I intend to see the Japanese Occupation through."

Lt. Col. Thomas Decorated

Lt. Col. Aubrey L. Thomas, former Chief of the Press Section, War Department Public Relations Division, received the Legion of Merit 10 Oct. for exceptionally meritorious service. Maj. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, Chief of the Public Relations Division, presented the award to Colonel Thomas who is now on terminal leave.

able to put armed forces in the field overnight and I am in favor of some form of universal military training, but I do not favor General Eisenhower's plan."

In relation to the present plan of paying discharges with bonds for unused accrued leave, Senator Maybank stated that he will introduce legislation that will provide for cashing the bonds, so much yearly, and making the bonds legal tender in payment for all Government obligations.

U. S. COAST GUARD

ALTHOUGH all Captain-of-the-Port identification cards have been declared invalid by the Commandant, Admiral James F. Farley, this action does not in any way affect the validity of Coast Guard identification cards issued to military members of its establishment.

Formal public notice of cancellation of Captain-of-the-Port identification cards appeared in the Federal Register of 11 Sept. 1946 (11FR 10103).

During the war, Captain-of-the-Port identification cards were issued in great numbers (more than four million in New York alone) to the millions of persons engaged, in any way, in the marine activities of the United States.

The cards were authorized under the Espionage Act of 15 June 1917, as amended. The Act permitted Captain-of-the-Port cards to be issued to: (a) mariners employed on U. S. ships; (b) employees working on ships, or at waterfront facilities, and (c) persons with incidental business on ships, or making incidental use of waterfront property.

Since the first issuance of a Captain-of-the-Port identification card the Coast Guard has stressed the fact that the cards were for physical identification only. Despite this warning, however, the cards were accepted by the public in general as "passes" or "permits," and also as identification to cash checks, establish credit, and other misuses.

With the cessation of hostilities, the identification card requirements were gradually relaxed by the Coast Guard. Now the cards are no longer required for any purposes. Accordingly, all Captain-of-the-Port identification cards have been invalidated. Since it has been the practice of the public to use and accept Captain-of-the-Port cards for purposes other than those for which they were intended, the public has been cautioned not to accept Captain-of-the-Port identification cards as identification, or for any other purpose.

3. Increase in active and retired pay and allowances to meet risen costs so as to enable maintenance of American standards of living, and protection of such pay from reduction through income taxes.
4. Institution of orderly promotion systems in the Regular Establishments with recognition of war service and war risks to prevent stagnation, and to insure the maintenance of high professional standards.
5. Continuance and expansion of service schools, including the Army and Navy Staff College, attendance of which shall be open to National Guard and Reserve officers.
6. Suitable rank and retirement benefits for former enlisted personnel and warrant officers who served as commissioned officers during the war.
7. Grant of the same rights and benefits to those who elect to remain in the Services as will be enjoyed by the discharged veterans.
8. Upward revision of pension scales to insure Service widows and dependents a living income.
9. Compensation for Service personnel who use privately owned automobiles on government business.
10. Maintenance of stock piles of strategic materials.

A TASK of the first magnitude has been imposed upon the Army and Navy in the President's directive that their expenditures for the current fiscal year be reduced by $1,000,000,000 and $650,000,000, respectively. Inasmuch as the first quarter of the fiscal year was nearly over when the cut was ordered, and many contracts signed and plans laid for operations based on the amounts made available in the annual appropriations acts, the full force of the reductions must be concentrated in the last three-quarters of the year and on such projects not yet actually under contract. There is fear that in attempting to meet the curtailments asked by the President the operating efficiency of the Armed Forces may be impaired or, at the least, plants closed and projects cancelled which will be found essential to national security and have to be resumed later at greater cost and at considerable loss in effectiveness until new manufacturing staffs can be gathered and trained. The Armed Forces are faced with responsibilities more onerous and widespread than during any other period of our history except those years of actual warfare. They are occupying the homelands of defeated enemies on both sides of the globe with troops and great numbers of civilian employees who must be kept continually supplied, and frequently replaced, necessitating long lines of communications. They must stand in readiness to provide ground, air, and naval contingents of whatever size and composition that may be decided upon by the United Nations Military Staffs and approved by the member governments. These functions are international obligations which the Government has assumed in the interest of world order and peace. Beyond all this our Armed Forces must recruit and train the Army, Navy, and Air Forces required for our peacetime Regular Establishments and their reserve components. For all of these functions the Services must purchase housing, clothing, food, transportation, weapons, and the myriads of other necessities from American industry. Research into and development of the atom bomb and guided missiles can not be permitted to lag if we are to keep safe in a world of turmoil. The current Appropriations were granted to the Armed Forces only after the closest scrutiny both by the President's Bureau of the Budget and the committees and Houses of Congress. Having confidence in the integrity of our military and naval leaders, it would be better, rather than setting specific figures in dollars and cents, to permit them to make all the economies they feel can be made without crippling their efforts to carry out the Government's policies and obligations. With regard for the nation's economic condition as well as its safety, we feel that better results could be achieved by such a method.

IF those members of Congress who are criticizing the number of retirements for physical disability in the Armed Forces would examine the situation closely they would realize that such retirements are a logical result of the strain of modern war. The medical records of both services are replete with cases of heart trouble and similar ailments growing out of the terrific pace imposed upon leaders who carried heavy responsibilities. One case—that of Maj. Gen. Theodore Roosevelt, jr.—brought this strikingly to public attention when he fell dead from a heart attack just after his division had landed in Normandy. Among general officers alone 29 died of natural causes between June of 1940 and April of 1946. In addition, during the war 24 general officers were killed in action, 26 wounded, two died of wounds, one of exposure, one died in a prison camp, nine were killed in airplane crashes, and 19 suffered the rigors of prison camps. As the Services well know, the Medical Boards which pass on physical retirements are thorough in their examinations and strict in their decisions, as many who have sought such retirement will testify. What gives rise to criticism of physical retirements is not the eligibility of those so retired, but the fact that Congress has given them a preferred standing over those retired by age, length of service, etc. In the Army an officer retired for physical disability is entitled to the rank and retired pay based on his temporary grade, while those retired for other causes must suffer reduction to their lower permanent rank. For the Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard Congress enacted a measure granting the higher temporary grades to all personnel retired under honorable conditions, but a similar and worthy measure for the Army failed when the Senate and House disagreed on provisions for Reserve and National Guard retirements. Entering into the picture also is the law which exempts personnel retired for physical disability from the payment of income tax on their service pay, but denies to other retired Service personnel even the $1,500 military exemption allowed to those on the active list. What Congress should do is not to attempt to restrict the thoroughly justified retirements for physical disabilities but to enact the temporary rank retirement law for the Army and to exempt all retired personnel from the payment of income tax.

The elimination of the muzzle flash from guns is one of the important problems of the Ordnance Department of the Army. The use of smokeless powder has eliminated the enormous clouds of black smoke which formerly enabled the enemy to readily "spot" the location of large emplacements in daylight, but there still remains the flash, which at night makes "spotting" a simple proposition.

AAF Gets Guided Missiles

Full responsibility for all research and development activities pertaining to guided missiles in the Army was assigned to the Army Air Forces this week.

The final decision as to within whose province present and future missile activities fall, lies with Maj. Gen. Henry C. Aurand, Director of Research and Development, War Department General Staff.

Differences of opinion have existed as to whether certain of the weapons were equipped with wings or fins, consequently the responsibility for their placing their development with the Army Air Forces or Army Ground Forces.

The Ordnance Department will continue to work upon various stages of the missiles. Both Ordnance and the AAF have engaged in the planning stage of the weapons. Within the Navy, the Bureau of Ships, the Bureau of Ordnance and the Bureau of Aeronautics have been engaged in the project.

A directive issued 7 Oct. by order of the Secretary of War, addressed to the commanding general of the Army Air Forces, the commanding general of the Army Ground Forces, and the chiefs of all Technical Services, constitutes the order. The text of the directive follows:

"In order to attain the most efficient utilization of scientific talent and engineering facilities, the following policies are announced to govern research and development activities pertaining to guided missiles:

"1. The Commanding General, Army Air Forces is responsible for the research and development activities pertaining to guided missiles. This is to include corresponding counter-measures, as well as related and associated items of equipment.

"2. In carrying out this responsibility, the Commanding General, Army Air Forces will effect maximum utilization of existing personnel and facilities, both within and without the War Department, by calling upon other developing agencies to perform tasks for which they are best qualified.

"3. The Director of Research and Development, War Department General Staff, in the manner provided by existing procedures, will determine both as to present and future activities which projects are to be classified as guided missile projects.

"The separate memoranda, subject 'Guided Missiles' dated 2 Oct. 1944, to Commanding Generals, Army Ground Forces, Army Service Forces and Army Air Forces, respectively, from the Deputy Chief of Staff, is hereby rescinded."

Test Flight Service System

The Army Air Forces has begun tests of a new Military Flight Service Communications System which is expected to mean an annual saving of about $2,000,000 and to improve present methods of ground communication with aircraft.

The system will be established officially 1 Nov., and is receiving a complete shake-down test during October. The AAF will continue to use civilian facilities during the test.

Nine AAF Flight Service Centers have been established at Olmstead Field, Pa.; MacDill Field, Fla.; Wright Field, Ohio; Maxwell Field, Ala.; Fort Worth, Tex.; Lowry Field, Colo.; March Field and

Hamilton Field, Calif.; and McChord Field, Wash. They will replace the 26 civil aircraft control centers in handling CFR (contact flight rules), flights of AAF aircraft, though civil centers will continue to route and regulate flights under IFR (instrument flight rules) conditions.

'Pacusan Dreamboat' Flight

The Army Air Forces B-29 "Pacusan Dreamboat," piloted by Col. Clarence S. Irvine, took off from Hickam Field, Hawaii, 4 Oct., and flew across the Arctic to Cairo, Egypt, a distance of 10,854 statute miles, in 39 hours 36 minutes.

The plane used was the same that Colonel Irvine used on his Guam-to-Washington flight last November, but was considerably modified for the Cairo flight. It was equipped with a stronger landing gear and heavier fuselage supports for the enlarged gasoline tanks in order to carry the 13,000 gallons of gasoline required for the flight. Four new engines were installed before the plane flew from McClellan Field, Calif., to Hawaii.

Take-off weight was estimated at 147,000 pounds, which is 27,000 pounds over the maximum gross weight designed for standard-built B-29s.

In addition to Colonel Irvine, the crew included:

Col. Beverly H. Warren, second pilot; Maj. James R. Dale, jr., flight engineer; R. B. Snodgrass (civilian), second flight engineer; Maj. Norman P. Hayes, navigator; Maj. James T. Brothers, second navigator; Maj. James R. Kerr, personal equipment officer and scanner; M. Sgt. Gordon S. Fish, of Appleton, Wisconsin, crew chief and scanner; Lt. Col. Frank J. Shannon, radio operator; M. Sgt. Edward G. Vasse, second radio operator.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

Foreign Affairs—An impressive demonstration of American sea and air power is supporting the foreign policy of the United States, and conspicuously aiding our difficult progress toward world peace, in a visible and most useful manner. In effect, we show that through our Fleet and our Air Forces we propose to continue as a factor in the Mediterranean. The perilous dispute over Trieste is no more needful of watchfulness than are the Russian demands for what is in fact sole control of the Dardanelles—for that would be the inescapable sequel to any "joint defense" of the straits by Turkey and the Soviet Union. The continued conflict in Palestine concerns far more than Jew and Arab; rather, it is one more concern of the Big Powers, with America's own interest made officially plain by the President's unexpected statement of a week ago. We cannot rationally express interest in the Middle East without manifesting our readiness to support our views on affairs in that troubled area. Now, through the prospective world flight of the B-29 group, touching Egypt, India and presumably China before soaring over the Pacific, it will be made apparent how ready we are, with that impressive arm of the service, to defend our interests in Asia and in the ocean. Specifically, and at a critical time for world cooperation, to members of the United Nations we offer proof of our ability to support the United Nations mandates. This likely will be helpful in promoting greater harmony in the impending meeting of the General Assembly of that organization, and in bringing about agreement respecting international control of atomic energy, presently blocked by Russian objection to the essential part of the Baruch plan. There is no threat to any nation in what the Navy and the Air Forces are doing; rather, there is evidence of our determination, and our strength, and our availability to promote peace. There is need for our demonstration, indicated by Premier Smuts' sober warning of "new dangers to come" if the victor nations remain split into two camps.

Majority acceptance by the Peace Conference delegates, at last, of the treaties for Italy, Rumania, Bulgaria, Hungary, and Finland, enable the Conference to come to an end on Monday next, with votes recorded. Thereby, the delegates will be free to attend the 24 October opening in New York of the United Nations' General Assembly. The Conference, of 21 nations, it must be remembered, merely makes recommendations; it still is the Big Four Conference which acts on the recommendations, but nobody watching the course of events these two months can miss the value of those majority votes, nor of the publicity attending the prolonged and often bitter debate which preceded the votes. The Big Four will still make the decisions, it is true, and it could not be otherwise, but those decisions now must be made in the light of the opinion of the smaller nations, vigorously expressed in the public debates within the separate Commissions of the Conference, and concretely in the votes at the plenary session. World opinion is not binding—indeed is quite obviously not unanimous as between eastern and western peoples—but it is not negligible. It, as well as great-power politics, has an influence upon short-term considerations, and greater weight in programs of longer extent. We can discern in some of the compromises a willingness, however reluctant, to make concessions to an antagonist who is supported by enough voices, regardless of his military strength. That is the beginning of conciliation, and of cooperation, and of peace. We see too few such examples, it is true, and there is no questioning that Soviet Russia's troops (having overrun all eastern Europe) have been the final determinant in a great many arguments, but who in his senses looked forward to any other conclusion? Here at least is encouragement to the American public, as well as to American statesmen, to regard world politics with cold realism. With that viewpoint, comes public understanding of Mr. Byrnes' firm statements on Europe in the past month, and recognition of the sober good judgment of General MacArthur's conduct of affairs in Japan throughout the occupation. Praise is due those statesmen of both parties who have recognized that on American foreign policies the parties can be in agreement, and who have acted upon that principle as loyally and unreservedly in peacetime as they did during the war. The appalling exception, in the case of Mr. Wallace's ill-thought and ill-timed revolt, was so clearly injurious to American interests abroad, and so promptly repudiated by informed public speakers, that its result may well prove to be helpful for the future, if only as a shocking example of what not to do. There are a great many matters not properly open to partisan argument. Secretary Byrnes, Senator Vandenberg and Senator Connally have indicated some of them. Several more are indicated by our military leaders, in programs for the upbuilding of our defenses against aggression.

Our decision to send a Naval contingent to represent the United States in the inaugural ceremonies at Chile 4-5 Nov., aroused the ire of the communists in Buenos Aires to cries of "Yankee imperialism" and charges that we are intervening in their affairs. Gabriel Gonzalez Videla, the Communist candidate in the Chilean elections, gained a plurality over the Conservative and Radical candidates but did not obtain a majority, with the result that the election will be decided by the Chilean Congress on 24 Oct. The U. S. Naval representation will be under Vice Adm. William M. Fechteler, USN, commander, Battleships and Cruisers, Atlantic Fleet, who will fly his flag on the new 45,000-ton battleship USS Wisconsin. Accompanying the Wisconsin will be the USS Leyte, a 27,000-ton carrier, and three destroyers, the USS Massey, USS Douglas H. Fox, and the USS Joseph P. Kennedy.

National Guard—Maj. Gen. Butler B. Miltonberger, Chief of the National Guard Col. Charles J. Himes, Lt. Col. Alfred G. Lambert, Capt. William M. Denny, Capt. Bureau, attended the American Legion Convention in San Francisco, Calif., 30 Sept. to 3 Oct.

Officers reporting for duty recently at the National Guard Bureau are:

Col. Oscar A. Alexson, Lt. Col. Samuel Pierce, jr., Lt. Col. Wallace Dawson, Lt. Lewis H. Kirk, Maj. Ralph E. Pearson.

Acting U. S. Property and Disbursing Officers now reporting through the National Guard Bureau instead of Selective Service are: Col. Gordon Smith, N. C.; Lt. Col. George W. Morrill, N. H.; Lt. Col. Henry J. Dolton, Miss.; Lt. Col. Fernand H. Gonaux, La.; Lt. Col. Walter E. McConnaughey, Neb.; Maj. Fletcher F. Bernsdorff, D. C.; Maj. John C. Wall, R. I.

Officers relieved from the Bureau: Col. Louis G. Bumen, Maj. Edward T. Baydala, and Capt. William F. Holderman who goes to Ft. Shafter, T. H.

Army Transportation Corps—Secretary of War Patterson, will be the principal speaker at the national convention of the Army Transportation Association to be held in Chicago, 13 and 14 Nov., it was announced this week by Col. Edmund C. R. Lasher, national president of the Association. The annual meeting of the Association's Board of Directors also will be held. Chairman of the Committee arranging for the Chicago convention is Col. Harry J. Doolley, Gray Lines Tours, LaSalle Hotel, Chicago, Ill.

Col. Roland P. Shugg, Chief of Staff for San Francisco Port of Embarkation, is being transferred to command of the New Orleans Port of Embarkation. Colonel Shugg will assume his new duties on or about 15 Oct. Coincidentally, it was announced that Col. Shugg has been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal in recognition of his skill, courage and effectiveness as Artillery Commander of the XIII Corps in Europe during World War II. He held the rank of Brigadier General in that command.

Lt. Col. Ray K. Bannister, Assistant Executive, Officer of the Chief of Transportation, has been awarded the Legion of Merit for performance of outstanding services in planning and supervising the program for staging and transporting redeployed military personnel and their dependents to the U. S., while serving as Director of Staging and Reception Areas at the 14th Major Port, Southampton, England, from 8 August 1944 to 16 May 1946. The presentation was made personally by Maj. Gen. Edmond H. Leavey, Chief of Transportation, at ceremonies in the Pentagon.

Bureau of Ships—Capt. Charles D. Wheelock, USN, has been named by Secretary Forrestal to be Deputy and Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Ships on 1 Nov. He will be promoted to Rear Admiral when he assumes his duties.

Capt. Wheelock will succeed Vice Admiral Earle W. Mills, who becomes Chief of the Bureau of Ships on 1 Nov., following the transfer of Vice Admiral E. L. Cochran to Chief of the Material Division, Office of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

A graduate of the U. S. Naval Academy in the class of 1920, Capt. Wheelock served in the Contract Design Section and later as head of the Design Branch of the Bureau of Ships during the period of the design and construction of the new Navy, from November 1936 to June 1944. He is credited with a number of important contributions in the field of warship design.

New Rank for Army—Latest rumor circulating in Washington is that the Army will seek to abolish the rank of brigadier general, many commands held by officers of that rank going to colonels, and create a new rank, "brigadier," more nearly comparable to the Navy's commodore.

In view of the opposition created by earlier suggestions that the Army create the rank of "Marshal," may feel that any attempt to set up the British rank of "brigadier" would not meet with a warm welcome.

Infantry School—Col. Leon C. Boineau was named Adjutant General of The Infantry School, Fort Benning, Ga., this week to replace Lt. Col. Wesley U. Moran. It is Colonel Boineau's third visit to this post. In 1928-29 he attended a Basic Infantry officers' course at The Infantry School and was from June, 1939, to October, 1940, Provost Marshal at Fort Benning. The new Adjutant will serve also as S-1. Col. and Mrs. Boineau now make their home at 411 Baltzell Fort Benning.

Heretofore, men chosen as officers candidates to train at The Infantry School, Fort Benning, had to be members of the Infantry and were graduated in that branch. Now, however, officer candidates from any and all branches of the service are to be combined in this army officer candidate school to receive the same preliminary training for a period of six months, regardless of their ultimate branch or corps. The simultaneous training of candidates from any and all branches will, according to Gen. Jacob L. Devers, Army Ground Forces Chief, eliminate much of the tactical misunderstanding which results from officers being familiar with only one phase of operations. Each graduate of the new system will have a thorough working knowledge of all other branches and will be able to cooperate more fully with them as a result.

The Infantry School was host Wednesday, 2 Oct., to members of The Air University from Maxwell Field, Alabama, who came here to observe the "Battalion in Attack," Infantry-Tank Artillery demonstration put on by School Troops. Jiggs IV, reportedly proud of his distinction of being the ugliest bulldog in captivity, first reported for duty as Marine Corps and Quantico mascot on 8 March 1939.

The vogue of "official" mascots which has since become a tradition in the Corps started with the purchase of a bulldog from a Philadelphia kennel in 1922. On 10 Oct. 1917, General Devers pointed out in his communication, a small group of American artillery officers was detailed to attend the French anti-aircraft artillery school. Since then, he added, steady progress has been noted in the development of American anti-aircraft weapons, technique of fire and tactics.

"In World War II," General Devers wrote, "our anti-aircraft artillery was greatly expanded and our troops were stationed all over the world. More than once these troops proved their versatility by not only fighting in their normal role, but, additionally, as close support, direct-fire artillery and even, upon occasion, as infantry."

Medical Department—The Office of the Surgeon, Berlin Military District, Berlin, Germany, has announced the termination of duties in that theater of Col. James H. Turner, who elected to return to the States for reassignment.

One of the latest accomplishments of Colonel Turner in his capacity as District Surgeon of US Berlin District, was the carrying out of an insect control program in Berlin. The anopheles mosquito was found to be causing considerable increase in incidence of malaria this summer among civilians in Berlin. Under his direction, and with the cooperation of military government a program of spraying all canals and bodies of water in the US Sector of the city was accomplished by crews working on the land, on the large lakes in Berlin and the final phase which was accomplished by a plane spraying the deadly insecticide. He arranged for this plane to be used in both the British and French Sectors of the city.

Colonel Turner made news in Berlin last May when he was presented the Legion of Merit Award by Maj. Gen. F. A. Keating, Commanding General of Berlin District. The citation related that Colonel Turner, between the dates mentioned, converted a damaged French hospital at Garche, near Paris, France, into a superior 1,000 bed hospital, and simultaneously rendered exemplary care and attention to an exceptionally large number of patients. These achievements also won for him the recognition of the French Government. Earlier this year he was awarded the French Legion of Honor for having performed outstanding medical services in France between September 1944 and VE Day.

Bureau of Naval Personnel—In line with a joint policy between the Army and Navy for the promotion of former prisoners of war, the Navy has begun to advance former prisoners to ranks they would ordinarily have earned except for their imprisonment. Of the promotions listed elsewhere in this issue, all but a very few are for former POW's.

In issuing these temporary appointments, the Navy notified each officer so promoted that the appointments cannot be made retroactive for pay purposes at this time.

However, should any future legislation authorize retroactive pay covering the period these officers would have served in advanced rank had they not been taken prisoners, these appointments should serve as the basis for any claim for back pay and allowances.

Ex prisoners of war in warrant or higher rank will be considered for permanent commissions in the Regular Navy regardless of previously established deadlines for submission of requests.

Adjutant General's Department—"Sound Off", a radio presentation of the Army Recruiting Service which has been a Summer feature over the Columbia Broadcasting System, proved so popular that it will be given 26 weeks over stations of the Mutual Network, Maj. Gen. Edward F. Witsell, The Adjutant General, announced this week. The opening program of the Fall and Winter series went on the air last Thursday night from Longacre Theater in New York City. Among those present at the broadcast were Lt. Gen. and Mrs. George Stratemeyer, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Charles B. Stone, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Robert W. Douglass, Jr., Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Edward F. Anderson and Col. W. Mason Wright, Jr.

Col. Harold W. Allen, former assistant adjutant general for General MacArthur, reported to The Adjutant General for duty last week and has been made executive for Col. Kenneth B. Bush, assistant The Adjutant General for Administrative Services.

Maj. Gen. Frank E. Lowe, former executive of the Mead Committee, was one of Gen. Witsell's visitors in the past week.

Lt. Col. Frederick R. Keeler, until recently assigned to the Army Medical Center at Ft. Sam Houston, has been transferred to the Antilles Department with station in Puerto Rico.

Lt. Col. Harry A. Patterson, who has been chairman of the AGO Suggestion Committee and who has handled numerous bond and charity campaigns, left the Pentagon this week for Walter Reed General Hospital. After treatment of a minor ailment, he will go on terminal leave.

Mr. Rob Roy Critchfield, who served with The Adjutant General's Office for over 32 years, died suddenly last week. At the time of his death, he was one of Gen. Witsell's administrative assistants.

A milestone in the organization of Regular Army troops stationed at the U. S. Military Academy was marked 1 Oct. with the organization of the 1802nd Special Regiment under the command of Col. Robert F. Sink. Colonel Sink formerly commanded the 500th Parachute Infantry Regiment of the 101st Airborne Division. The new regiment is composed of the fifteen detachments which formerly operated under Colonel Sink as Commanding Officer of Troops.

The regiment is organized into two battalions, and the regimental commander will be assisted by a newly-formed staff. This arrangement is calculated to increase the efficiency of the various organizations and at the same time to be more economical of manpower by centralizing certain administrative procedures which formerly were duplicated. The number of the 1802nd Special Regiment is significant in that the Military Academy was founded in 1802.

Colonel Sink's staff will consist of Lt. Col. Allen D. Hulse, Executive Officer; Lt. Col. Fred H. Cantrell, Adjutant; Lt. Col. Raymond D. Shoemaker, Jr., Intelligence Plans, and Training Officer; Lt. Col. Roy W. Marcy, Assistant Plans and Training Officer; Maj. Raleigh O. Worrell, Supply Officer; CWO John H. Long, Personnel Officer.

The First Battalion, concerned largely with the specialized training of cadets, is comprised by the Armored, Cavalry, Coast Artillery Corps, Engineer, Field Artillery, and Infantry detachments.

The Second Battalion is made up of the technical and service detachments: Military Police, Mess, Staff and Service, Band and Field Music, Ordnance, Transportation Corps, Signal, Medical, and USMA Preparatory School.

The retirement and transfer to the Enlisted Reserve Corps on 30 Sept. of T. Sgt. John C. Hughes has been announced by Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Superintendent of the United States Military Academy. Sgt. Hughes is a member of the USMA Staff and Service Detachment. He was born in Newcastle, England, and served with the British Army during World War I.

cal officers as well as specialized training in various branches of army medicine, including a school of military neuro-psychiatry for both medical officers and nurses, and a school of roentgenology. The Medical Field Service School, which had long been located at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania, was moved to Fort Sam Houston, and became a part of the Army Medical Department Schools.

The Medical Department Enlisted Technicians School, which has been located at Brooke since the start of World War II, trains enlisted personnel as medical and surgical technicians as well as in technical fields of dentistry, X-ray, pharmacy, and laboratory operations. Instruction is also provided in the repair and maintenance of hospital equipment.

The Army Area Laboratory provides laboratory service and research facilities for a wide area.

The Central Dental Laboratory services, for dental prosthetic purposes, the army installations in this area.

The Medical Training Center provides enlisted men with eight weeks instruction, including the common specialist courses.

In addition to the units stationed at Fort Sam Houston, Brooke Army Medical Center also includes the Medical Training Center, Camp Polk, La., which is a satellite command under the jurisdiction of the Commandant, Brooke Army Medical Center.

The Medical Training Center at Camp Polk was activated on 1 July 1946. Here, eight weeks of basic military training is given newly inducted troops. Following basic training, many of the trainees are transferred to Brooke for specialized Medical Department training.

The Brooke Army Medical Center is a Class II activity, under direct jurisdiction of The Surgeon General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk.

Financial Digest

Mr. C. E. Wilson, president of General Motors Corporation, speaking at a National Press Club luncheon in Washington, D. C., last week, outlined the production problems the nation faces in the post-war period.

"The automobile industry," Mr. Wilson said, "has spared no effort to produce cars and trucks in volume to satisfy the pressing demand of the American people. The industry has fallen far short of what it had hoped to do, and far short of what it could have done if all of us—government, labor and industry—had worked at the reconversion of a peace production job like we did at the war production job when we were in that life and death struggle. Perhaps it was not realized how much easier it was to stop a going activity—war production—than it was to start equivalent peacetime activities to take its place. Perhaps it wasn't fully realized that organized employment—in other words, strikes—would so disorganize industry and increase costs and prices by creating further shortages when important shortages already existed."

Mr. Wilson presented a series of observations which he felt to bear importantly on the production situation in which the country, and particularly his corporation, finds itself, as follows:

"The clean-up, the mop-up, the reconversion to peacetime activities still require hard work, patience, understanding and some sacrifice on the part of all of us. * * * As a nation, it is possible for all of us to have more only if we produce more. * * * Only by work and efficient production can wages and prices be brought into line. * * * If we are to carry out our expensive foreign policies and responsibilities; if we are to continue, even approximately, the present high rate of federal, state and municipal expenditures; and still have a reasonable standard of living left, we are going to have to quit quarreling and go to work. * * * We should all be very thankful that America has had and is having an unusually good crop year. * * * We are in the middle of a stream, or sea, crossing over from land of war, regimentation and dictatorship, to the land of peace and plenty, of freedom and opportunity. * * * We will all be more happy when thrift and industry have their reward, laziness and dissipation their penalty, when the planning of the country is from the grass roots by the millions of its citizens according to their individual desires, abilities and ambitions—when the customer is again the boss."

Merchant Marine

The current maritime strike, most recent of a series of strikes that have tied up the nation's shipping, has as one of its issues the right of ship owners and operators to employ masters and other ship's officers without regard to union seniority.

The AFL Masters, Mates and Pilots, representing deck officers, and the CIO Marine Engineers have been on strike since the first of October because of disagreement on wages, maintenance of union membership, and preferential hiring.

West Coast owners have rejected the officers' demands for preferential hiring with the view that ship's officers, with their authority and responsibility unequalled except under maritime law, should continue to serve primarily as representatives of the owners; and that only by regarding ship's officers as the owners' representatives can financial interest in merchant vessels be adequately safeguarded.

East Coast and Gulf operators have agreed verbally to demands for preferential hiring. The Maritime Commission reportedly has agreed to effect on its vessels whatever agreement is made with East Coast and Gulf operators.

The former USS Mayflower, for 35 years a vessel of the U. S. Navy and long-time Presidential yacht, was offered for sale today by the Maritime Commission for operation or scrapping. She is now moored at the Coast Guard Yard, at Curtis Bay, Md.

Built in Glasgow in 1896, the steel, twin-screw Mayflower is 275 feet long, 1,780 gross tons, and has 4,800 horsepower oil-burning engines. She was sold once before for scrap, after sinking in the Philadelphia Navy Yard in 1931 following a fire on board.

When all manner of craft was being enlisted in the war effort, she was requisitioned in 1942 for use of the Coast Guard. More than a million dollars was spent in re-conditioning and reconversion of the veteran, and, until recently declared surplus, she served the Coast Guard in escort and patrol work.
